New Summer Program Options for Geneva Business School Students with UCL and UC Berkeley

Geneva, Switzerland: Geneva Business School today announced new partnerships with University College London (UCL) and University of California, Berkeley to provide summer study abroad programs for students.

Summer programs allow students from Geneva Business School to spend three or more weeks studying at the campus of UC Berkeley or UCL. These programs permit our highly international student body to experience a new culture, expand their professional network, and learn valuable knowledge on top of their education at Geneva Business School.

UCL and UC Berkeley are among the very best higher education institutions worldwide, ranked 8th and 27th respectively, per the QS World University Rankings 2023.

"The UCL offers undergraduate students from around the world the opportunity to live in the heart of London and take modules at the 8th best university in the world (QS Rankings). However, the UCL is more than just an academic experience – it is a social experience and a cultural experience, with a wide range of activities designed to help students get to know each other, taste life in London and have a summer to remember forever!" says Rhod Fiorini, Head of UCL Summer School, UK.

"On behalf of UC Berkeley Summer Sessions, I'm looking forward to partnering with the Geneva Business School and welcoming their students into our summer student programs." says Jannie Akune, Director of Global Partnerships at UC Berkeley Extension, USA.

"We are incredibly proud to be partnering with such esteemed institutions. These partnerships will help strengthen the global network between higher education institutions. We are excited to expand our educational offerings to students and look forward to growing this community in the coming years." says Prof Nicola Jackman, CEO & Spain Campus Director at Geneva Business School.
